

Name: _____ Date: _____

Each day when you get back from site, you will write a journal entry about what you experienced throughout the day. You want to give a brief look at the tasks you performed during the day, but the majority of your entry should describe what you learned as a result of your work.

DIRECTIONS Follow the directions in each section to create a reflective journal entry. By the time you're done with this assignment, you will have written two paragraphs of reflection about your site work!

List some tasks you performed at site (you may have more than 5). _____

In complete sentences, describe one interesting event, conversation, interaction, or issue that came up during your day (it may or may not be directly related to your site work).

Why is it interesting or memorable to you? _____

Look at the tasks you performed and write one paragraph (4-7 sentences) about your day using any combination of the following:

What I enjoyed

What I found difficult

What really worked and why

What I would do differently next time

When you go to write your next entry, you can refer to this instead of having to go through all the steps.

Notice that writing a reflective journal entry is describing what you learned at site—not just telling what you did.
